RECORD YEAR FOR FOREIGN MISSIONARIES

The largest number of new missionaries ever sent to foreign fields in any one year in the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church were sent during the fiscal year ending November 1st, 1920, according to announcement today by Bishop Wm. F. McDowell. The largest previous year was 1917, when 96 recruits were appointed, and sent out by the Methodists. During the fiscal year just concluded, 275 new missionaries were appointed, of which 80 were assigned to South America, 69 to China, 50 to India and Burma, 30 to Africa, 30 to Malaya, 6 to Mexico, 5 to Japan, 2 to Korea, and 2 to Europe. The list does not include workers in European war areas. A majority of the new appointees have already reached their stations. According to activity they are classified as follows: 103 evangelists, 99 educational, 14 medical, and 36 industrial. The 1920 increase marks the first year of the five-year Centenary program of the Methodist which includes the expenditure of $115,000, 000 in war reconstruction and general expansion of church activities.

SHORT TALKS ON PENNA'S FORESTS

SHORT TALKS ON THE FOREST AND THE LUMBER SITUATION

By Gifford Pichot, Chief Forester of Pennsylvania

NO. 12—FOREST AND RECREATION

The woods are the people's playgrounds and were intended by Nature to be such. Why else were they filled with shaded vistas, the sparkling streams, the bubbling springs, the placid lakes? Here are the game and fishes which make the worker forget his toil. Here are to be found quiet, rest, clean pleasure, and health renewed.

While the forest is growing lumber it is also furnishing for the people who live in the cities and towns the refuge that attracts them when play time comes. Our duty is protecting the forests is not confined, therefore, to the growth of lumber and wood. Pennsylvania has playgrounds, and the possibility of playgrounds, second to no other state. There is a materialistic side to this feature of forest protection, too. When our forest lands are restored as they should be, and as they are going to be; when good roads traverse them, and all their beauties and their uses are brought out, they will afford a resort country eclipsing in beauty, accessibility, and comfort all other resort systems in America.

The people of Pennsylvania in search of outing are losing valuable opportunities when they fail to take advantage of the rare chance which is theirs to spend a part of every summer or fall in Pennsylvania's woods. There are few points in the state that are too far distant from a forest to make it too expensive or too difficult for the people of the community to enjoy what Nature made for them.

The forest project and increase game; the more forests we have the more fish we have the chance to catch. The game sanctuaries established in Pennsylvania forests in recent years have increased the deer, the squirrel, the bear, the turkey, the rabbits, and other kinds of meat-producing forms of wild life. In Westmoreland county there had not been a deer killed for decades; eighty-one bucks were shot in the season of 1918, after but a few years of forest protection.

On its own forest land the Commonwealth has established numerous recreation grounds for the use of the public and its aim is to establish many places on each State Forest. The Voneida recreation center in Alto county, Caledonia and Mont Alto parks in Franklin and Adams counties; Pine Grove in Cumberland county are instances that illustrate the point.

The State Forests are the real playgrounds of the people. They are open to the public and the people are welcome to make use of them. They alone of all the woodland in the state, can ever be closed to the enjoyment of all the people. To maintain them for the pleasure and benefit of all alike and to develop their potentialities, the fires must be stopped, devastation must cease, and trees must be given a chance to grow. Every sportsman, every vacationist, every Nature lover is or should be an earnest protector of the forests. Their help will count more than they know and more than anyone can tell. (Next week—"The Forests and Everyday Things.")

HARDING'S ELECTION.

The American people wanted a change, and they have voted for a change.

They did not know what kind of change they wanted, and they do not know to-day what kind of change they have voted for. All of the restlessness and discontent bred of the war has finally found expression in the ballot-box, and the result is Warren G. Harding.

Mr. Harding is a well-meaning amiable man who has shown during the campaign no understanding whatever of any of the real problems of peace and reconstruction. His political career has been without distinction of any kind whatsoever. He has been simply a Republican politician of unswerving regularity who has taken up any policy agreed to by the party leaders and supported it with fidelity and such ability as he could command. Whenever there has been a division in the party councils he has followed the line of least resistance, with a marked preference for extreme conservatism.

The day he was nominated for President he was the choice of the Republicans of no State in the Union. Even in Ohio the Republican voters had divided at the primaries and he was unable to obtain a united delegation from his own State. Had the question of his nomination been submitted to the rank and file of the party throughout the country it may be doubted if he would have received 300,000 votes out of 13,000,000. Yet in spite of this pitiful lack of popular support he was named for President by the Republican bosses and he has been the Republican candidate.

Nominally, therefore, Mr. Harding is to be President of the United States. Who the actual President is to be and what the politics of the new Administration are to be nobody knows. Mr. Harding himself does not know, nor does he pretend to know. He will do what the strongest faction of the Republican Party tells him to do. If Mr. Root and Mr. Taft and their friends gain the ascendancy, they will control the foreign policy of the Administration. If Senator Johnson and Senator Borah and the Battalion of Death gain control, they will dominate the foreign policy. A similar game of chance will determine the domestic politics as well.

What is certain is that the country has returned for a time to reaction, in the naive belief that Republican politics can cure all the economic evils that were produced by a war in which 10,000,000 lives have been lost and $300,000,000,000 in property destroyed.

No President of the United States at the time of his election ever showed fewer qualifications for the task that confronted him than Mr. Harding. He has displayed in this campaign a solidified and retains no political impressions that were made since the days of McKinley and Hanna. He will show any capacity for leadership since his nomination. Whether he will show any capacity for leadership after his inauguration remains to be seen.

The American people have displayed the same kind of political intelligence that the people of New York displayed in 1917 when they threw out the Mitchell Administration and made John F. Hyland Mayor. These exploits in political prejudice are always expensive, and four years from now the country will be in a better position to estimate the cost of this manifestation of its worst qualities.

As to Mr. Harding himself, we can only wish him well. He is confronted at best with a task that is impossible in its entirety, since no President that ever lived could redeem the campaign pledges that have been made in his behalf, some of them by himself. It is easy to abuse Woodrow Wilson in the White House is a man's job, and Mr. Harding will not have the aid either of a united party or of those dominant qualities that can batter down opposition. He will have to go with a tide that runs erratically and treacherously, and the very voters that have put him into Presidency to do the impossible will be ready to desert him at the first sign of failure.

We, quite apart from any issue of political principle, cannot regard Mr. Harding as the type of man who ought to be President at this time. But recognizing the seriousness of his task, we shall try to help him rather than hinder him, and in no case shall we ever hinder him, and in no case shall we ever subject him to the kind of malicious obstruction that Republican newspapers and in the pathway of President Wilson. We would much rather have Mr. Harding succeed than fail. We are willing to do what we can to aid him if the politics of his Administration permit such assistance, and to forget all the nonsense he has uttered in the campaign—to wipe off the slate—to start clean—to realize that the very safety of civilization may depend upon the Administration, and to trample all petty partisan considerations under foot while he faces the inexorable facts of a most serious situation. To begin otherwise is to invite disaster.

As to the League of Nations, none of its true supporters will falter on account of Mr. Harding's majorities. Appealing from Philip drunk to Philip sober, they will keep their faith steadfast and unswerving. Every reason that existed before election in favor of the ratification of the covenant exists after the election. None of the elementary facts have been changed by the ballots that were cast for Mr. Harding.

The time has now come when Republicans like Mr. Taft and Mr. Root and Mr. Hoover and Mr. Straus must redeem their own pledges. They have said to the voters that Mr. League could all be ignored and that his election would mean that the United States would join the other nations in guaranteeing the peace of the world. The duty of fulfillment rests with them. Hundreds of thousands of the friends of the League voted for Mr. Harding in the belief that Mr. Taft and his associates had told them the truth. The record is made and the obligation must be redeemed, or they too will have been convicted of defrauding both the living and the dead.

CIVIC NOTES

The regular monthly meeting of the Civic Club will be held next Monday evening, November 8. The meeting will begin promptly at 7:30 in the basement of the Trust Company Building, which is the club's regular meeting place every second Monday of each month. This is a timely occasion for a full and enthusiastic assembly of all members past, present and future, (and honorably). All will be cordially received. Put on your red, white and blue garments of civic pride and patriotism! Our beloved America is made up not only of rural districts, and their inhabitants,—but by "small town" idealists and enthusiasts, dreamers and executives!

November 8 is the beginning of the new Club year, new officers, and the forming of new committees. Reports of interest will be given including those of the delegates to the recent convention at Harrisburg of "The State Federation of Pennsylvania Women" to which "The Bedford Civic Club" was admitted on June 12, 1920. Mr. Shirley Hulse will give a full report of the water situation, and of work done the past week at the Todd Reservoir.

Remember next Monday evening, 7:30, Nov. 8.

BRYAN MUST BE RECKONED WITH

It goes without saying that when you ignore William Jennings Bryan in a political campaign you ignore one of the most powerful factors, for an individual, in the whole United States. We do not except any Democrat or Republican. A man who can poll over six and a quarter million of votes for two campaigns and gains to six and a half millions in the third campaign is not to be dealt with lightly. The convention ignored him in every instance at San Francisco through the influence of Wall Street and the people ignored the convention's actions at the polls. Wall Street didn't make any gains for the party and to be sure Bryan didn't. In other words Wall Street named the candidate and then the people turned him down but when Bryan names the candidate the people are for him, which is a better combination even if Wall Street does dissent. We repeat that the party cannot ignore Bryan and hope to win. He has the friends.

This campaign was the most unusual ever held. There was not the least enthusiasm. The people knew that Wall Street had named the man and the apathy was so great that Wall Street knew that it could elect either candidate so they chose the one they could handle the easiest, a path of least resistance, the natural course, and the people indifferent fell to it. When returns came to the various headquarters the voting public viewed them as mere commonplace and there was no enthusiasm whatever. No cheering among Republicans and no regret among Democrats. Each side felt on the same general trend, "I don't care." When the immense majorities for Harding were flashed upon the screen grunts were audible even from Republicans, a situation astounding to the average party enthusiast. In Cumberland in a theatre the actor stopped occasionally to read telegraphic messages and when he read the solid South went for Cox no applause was given and when he announced that New York went 800,000 at least for Harding no applause was given. He looked at the audience and waited for its approval and when he got none he said there were a few more results but he would not take time to read them. At 12 o'clock Bedford streets were clear and the Inquire had no one to look at their screens. The apathy of the voters cannot be explained except that the people wanted a "change" only half-heartedly, as if afraid they had done wrong by bringing it on.

HARDING AND COOLIDGE LANDSLIDE

Back to "Normalcy" is the Verdict

The election returns indicate a tremendous landslide for the Republican ticket all over the country, the "Solid South" remaining as usual Democratic. There was a tremendous vote polled notwithstanding the fact that nearly every place there was a down pour of the elements. The women voted equal to the men in nearly every instance and especially in the large cities.

The verdict can be interpreted as none other than a desire of the people to get back to "Normalcy" as Senator Harding on his political speech writer, Put it. This means to return to $1.00 wheat, 40 cent oats, and 75c corn along with $1 to $2 wages. There has been more or less a very decided domestic unrest in the United States for a year or more and the people wanted a change. There are living better than they ever lived. They have more luxuries of life than they ever had. They have had more leisure than ever before but still they weren't satisfied. They must want less comforts, fewer luxuries and less leisure as in former days where it kept them on their knees all the time to earn their living. One farmer in Bedford township figures $2900 clear money so far in 1920. We suppose he wants to go back to the time when he could clear the $290 without the extra zero (0) attached. That's "Normalcy". The "Wiggle Wabble" tactics of the Republicans won them success. One faction said we wanted a League of Nations and another said we didn't. One would say the League of Nations would promote war and another would say it would keep us out of war. One would say taxes were too high and another would say that you ought to do so-and-so which would cause more taxes. Wages were too high for some and not high enough for others. There were opposition to the enforcement of prohibition and opposition to permission to government control of business and opposition when the government did control it.

There was opposition to woman suffrage and opposition to any restriction of woman suffrage. There was opposition because wages were high and opposition because costs were of lower and all this opposition concentrated on President Wilson's shoulders. How Harding hopes to satisfy these conflicting complaints is a problem and we are under the impression that by the time the Republican candidate get it done the people will want another "change" back to "Normalcy".

It will take some time to get the people together on these conflicting principles and Harding's managers will find it the most difficult task they ever encountered. No one except Harding to do anything himself. He can't. He has so many strings to him. Borah and Johnson against Taft and Root. The prohibitionist against personal liberty, a it is called and a thousand and one hostile opinions, all of which Harding will have to harmonize and its a task.

LOCAL CAMPAIGN

In the campaign in Bedford County the Republican ticket won out as usual but Lieut. Sherman R. Nave made inroads to the path of Ralph Hoover. Hoover's majority should have been 5000 but Nave smashed it by 2000 voters. This is a direct blow to the bipartisan bosses of Bedford County who want to dominate the whole thing for their own pocket books. It is going the rounds now that "Bill" Brice, Jr. will be out for the Postmastership and Annie Gilchrist his sister-in-law is going to be his assistant and his wife is going to be school director. His father is now chief Burgess and treasurer to the Directors of Poor. Of course if "Bill" gets to be Postmaster then Wm. Beam, his brother-in-law will be reinstated as second assistant. Bill is now State Committeeman of the Republican party. So the line up will be:

Wm. Brice—Republican State Committeeman.

Wm. Brice—Postmaster

Wm. Brice sister-in-law—State Committeewoman.

Wm. Brice sister-in-law—1st Asst. Postmaster

Wm. Brice's brother-in-law—2nd Asst. Postmaster

Wm. Brice's Wife—School Director

Wm. Brice's Father—Burgess.

Wm. Brice's Father—Treasurer Bed Co. Alms House.

The women in the towns turned out even better than the men and exercised their voting privileges Bedford Borough and Everett Borough cast the largest votes of the women. The rainy day kept many country voters away from the polls.

Film Shows Treatment of Flock at Culling Time in Fall and on to Selling of Lambs.

A motion picture film dealing with sheep on the farm has recently been completed by the film laboratories of the United States department of agriculture in co-operation with the bureau of animal industry. The film is now available for use by county agents, county or state sheep breeders' association, agricultural colleges, and other department or co-operative workers or agencies.

The film is in three sections and four reels. About 45 minutes is required for the showing of the whole production.

The subject treated in the first and second reel is a year with the flock on the farm, beginning in the fall at the time that the ewe flock should be culled prior to breeding, and carrying it on through until the lambs are sold. Each seasonal practice is brought out and educational points are featured. The third reel deals with the co-operative marketing of wool and lambs, and the fourth reel with the slaughtering of a mutton sheep, dressing the carcass, and then cutting it up for meat consumption.

MEAT SUPPLIES FOR FAMILY

Greater Portion of Pork Products Used by Farmers Are Produced on Home Farm.

Nearly two-thirds of the meat eaten on the farm is pork, the average farm consumption of pork being over 500 pounds per family. The greater portion of the pork products used by farmers are produced on the home farm. A small number of pigs can be raised cheaply, says the United States department of agriculture. Kitchen and garden wastes, and some times dairy by-products, are available for feed. The farmer usually kills the hogs and dresses them on his own place. The hog furnishes a good variety of meat and also lard. The smoke house, a common improvement on the farm, provides a convenient way for curing pork.

SHEEP BUSINESS PROFITABLE

Study Being Made of Specialized Raising With Complete Reliance on Forage Crops.

Results of a farm sheep experiment reported by the United States department of agriculture show clearly the possibility of a profitable sheep-raising business upon eastern lands. At the government farm Beltsville, Md., a study is being made of specialized intensive sheep raising with complete reliance upon forage crops for summer pasturage.

In 1916 a 30-acre area did not produce forage enough to feed satisfactorily 44 Southdown ewes and 33 lambs. This field is now capable of furnishing sufficient summer feed for 100 ewes with their lambs. The improvement is due in part to the application of manures, lime and phosphates, but chiefly to the fact that leguminous crops were largely used and all crops were fed upon the ground. Under the system followed forage crops are seeded in rotation and the sheep are allowed such frequent changes of pasture as are necessary to prevent troubles from parasites.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Practically all range-bred lambs are docked and castrated.

Hogs on pasture are not so liable to be troubled with intestinal worms and are usually in a thrifty condition.

Horses' teeth demand an examination at least once a year. As the horse gets some age, his teeth need rasping oftener.

The success of the hog business hinges on the fact that the most economical gains are made when the pig is in a growing condition.

The calf will start to eat grain when about two weeks old and it is a good idea to start out with ground oats, barley or corn meal and wheat bran.

The "U.S." Walrus

Warm as an Arctic-washes off like a Boot

The "U.S." Walrus—worn by farmers everywhere

FOR years farmers have needed a high rubber overshoe—easy to put on and take off—warm and comfortable—one that could be easily cleaned of the dirt of the barnyard.

There's an overshoe like that ready for you this winter. With an all-rubber surface—snow-tight and water-tight—lined with soft, warm fleece—the U. S. Walrus is just the thing you've been looking for.

It slips right on over your leather shoes. You can work in sticky mud all day, but when you get home a pail of water or a rinse at the pump washes the U. S. Walrus as clean as when you started. No chance for dried mud to rot that smooth rubber surface!

At exactly the place where overshoes usually wear out first, the U. S. Walrus has been made strongest. Its sole consists of heavy layers of the finest rubber. All other points of strain are specially reinforced.

Ask your dealer to show you a pair of the U. S. Walrus. Examine for yourself their wonderful built-to-wear construction. After you've worn a pair for a day or two, you'll realize why farmers everywhere are buying them.

Other types of "U.S." Footwear—built for rough service

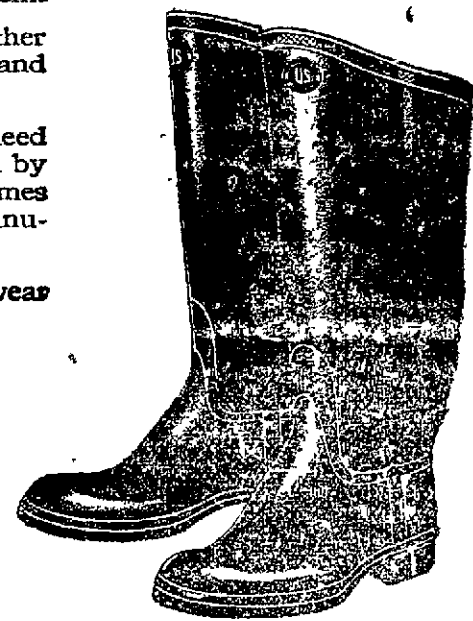

U. S. Boots have all the wear and comfort which the accumulated improvements of 74 years have given them.

U. S. Bootees lace on over the sock like a leather shoe. You can wear them all day long in mud and water—your feet will stay dry and comfortable.

The U. S. line of footwear has a type for every need—arctics, rubbers, "overs." Every one is backed by over half a century of experience. The rubber comes from our own plantations—the whole process of manufacture is supervised by experts.

I personally pay very careful attention to the proper fitting of a nose piece or bridge. I see that it has the exact shape and style to fit snugly to the one particular point on the crest of the nose, so the pupil of the eye can exactly conform with the center or middle of the lens, and the object will then be deposited at the proper place on the Retina, and thereby your error in Refraction will be corrected, and you will have a perfect vision or sight, and a pair of glasses that will harmonize with your face. The sight is so often 'interfered' with by disease of the Vital organs, "Creeping disease," of slow progress, the nerves which enter into the eyes, the upper and lower lids, which control the muscular action, very often become impaired by disease, need to be recognized and properly treated. SAMMY'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

"I have an announcement I wish to make," said Sammy Sausage, "and I am hoping I will have the attention of all the pigs in the pig pen when I make it."

"Dear me, dear me," said Brother Bacon, "how finely you are talking. It doesn't sound much like a pig."

"I don't mean it to sound so fine," said Sammy Sausage, "but I thought I would speak in such a way that every pig would listen."

"If you spoke of food," said Master Pink Pig, "we'd all listen."

"No, you wouldn't," said Sammy Sausage, "you'd be off hunting for it."

"True, true," said Miss Ham, "Sammy Sausage made a wise speech."

"Well," he said, "will you all listen to my announcement?"

"What is an announcement?" asked Brother Bacon.

"An announcement," said Sammy Sausage, "is something one announces or squeals or says or grunts. It is something to be told to others, or announced to others or squealed to others or grunted to others or—"

"Oh, we understand," said Brother Bacon. "You don't have to spend the whole day explaining."

"You asked for an explanation," said Sammy, squealing proudly.

"And we got it," said Brother Bacon.

"Oh well, Sammy," he added, "I was only joking. But I did mean to stop you before you used up too much time with explaining. After we understood it was enough."

"Well," said Sammy Sausage, "then you would like to hear my announcement?"

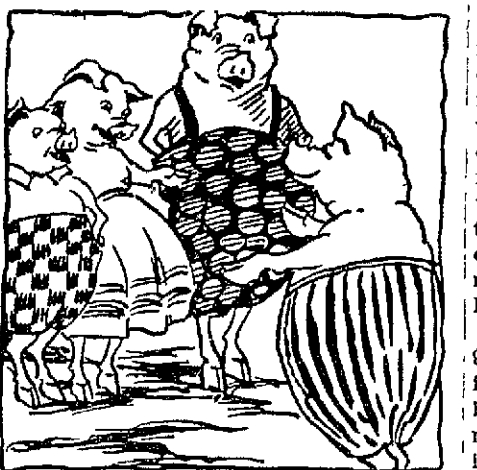

"We would," they all squealed.

"I have heard," said Sammy, "for it has reached my pig ears, that there are such things as pedigree pigs. They are aristocratic, superior pigs, just as there are pedigree sheep and pedigree cows and pedigree dogs."

"To have sheep and cows and dogs with pedigrees or titles or lots of ancestors back of them of great note and fame is all right but when pigs get into such a snobbish class I'm not for it."

"I don't want to belong to such a family of pigs, not only for the reason that I couldn't I suppose, but because there is something so plain and simple and dirty and piggy about being plain pigs."

"If we had pedigrees we might become refined and unselfish and well educated and all such things. That would never, never do. So I think we should all promise ourselves and each other that if anyone comes along and offers us a title we will refuse it. We must not become lords and lady pigs and to be a princess pig would be quite too ridiculous."

"Will You All Listen?"

"We wouldn't want to be kings and queens and wear crowns on our snouts and if we got on up in the world and had pedigrees we might become even kings and queens."

"I believe," said Miss Ham, "that one has to have a pedigree handed down to one."

"Well," said Sammy, "then I say when it is handed to us, let us not accept it but close our hands or paws or feet in disgust and refusal."

"But I mean," said Miss Ham, "that a pedigree would have to come down to us from generation to generation, from grandfather to father and from father to son."

"Well, all the more reason for my announcement," said Sammy Sausage. "Let none of us be so fine that we can hand down pedigrees to our sons and to their sons. Let us be real pigs and let us hand down to all little pigs the finest pig rules in the world; namely:

"Be greedy.
"Be selfish.
"Be dirty.
"Love the mud.
"And always think of yourselves first."
"Fine rules," squealed and grunted all the pigs together, "fine rules."

Would Dry Up Occasionally.

There is a certain long-suffering father whose nerves sometimes give way under questions from his talkative eight-year-old son.

"Dad," said the youngster, just as the old man settled down for a perusal of his newspaper, "Dad, am I made of dust?"

"I think not," responded the unhappy parent, "otherwise you would dry up once in a while."

PLEBES IN WEST POINT ARE 630

NEW CLASS HAS MORE FROM THE RANKS OF THE ARMY THAN EVER BEFORE.

ENTRANCE IS FACILITATED

Seven Preparatory Schools Opened to Coach Soldiers for the Entrance Examinations — Inducements Offered for Enlistment in the Navy.

By JAMES P. HORNADAY.

Washington—The new class of "plebes" at the United States Military academy at West Point is 630 strong and includes the largest number of appointees from the ranks of the army in the history of West Point, with 60 former buck privates enrolled. Prior to 1918 soldiers could enter the military academy from the ranks only upon appointment by their congressmen, but today recruits after one year's service with the colors, between nineteen and twenty-two years of age, who can pass the entrance examination, are eligible without political assistance.

Major General Harris, the adjutant general, announces that any young high school graduate enlisting, whose record is clear, may enter West Point on the first entrance date after one year of service. Enlisted men between the ages of seventeen and twenty-four who have served honorably and faithfully for not less than one year in the armed forces of the United States or the allied armies in the World war, possessing the other requisite qualifications, may be admitted on July 1, 1921. The other enlisted candidates must have served for one year in the regular army prior to July 1, 1921, and be between the ages of nineteen and twenty-two.

Seven Preparatory Schools.

Seven preparatory schools have been opened, at Camp Dix, N. J.; Camp Devens, Mass.; Camp Lewis, Wash.; Camp Travis, Tex., and Camp Gordon, Ga., as well as in Coblenz, Germany, and Panama, for the purpose of preparing soldiers for the entrance examinations. These candidates also have the option of a three months' furlough for special study and coaching. World war service applies equally to young men who were drafted or enlisted and includes the National Guard as well as the army. After 1921, age qualifications revert to the old limits of nineteen to twenty-two for enlisted men. The West Point course has been changed back to four years instead of three.

The secretary of the navy has directed a special campaign to be undertaken to fill the remaining vacancies in the ranks of the enlisted personnel of the navy by offering special inducements. Notwithstanding the fact that the navy is now recruiting more than ever before, except in war time, the realization that the navy man in peace time is the one who must be qualified to defend the country in the first line of battle in war has resulted in the navy's never consenting to lower the high standards of its men.

The secretary says that there are 9,568 young men studying specialties in navy schools. From these men will be drawn the skilled specialists of the navy. There are left 4,700 vacancies in the schools, and these vacancies have been thrown open to young men of the country in civil life. These schools were formerly kept for previous service men. A new policy has also been developed so that those who like foreign travel will be given opportunities to see the world.

The navy schools are paying special attention to physical development, and the latest statistics show an average gain of ten pounds in weight in four months and gratifying increases in height and chest development.

New Chaplains Appointed.

Major General Harris announces the selection and appointment of 89 new chaplains for the regular army out of 300 applicants who had served as officers throughout the war. This is in conformity with the new reorganization law providing for 240 chaplains, or one to each 1,200 officers and men. All the aspirants were carefully examined by different boards of officers as to their professional, mental and physical qualifications, and the survivors of this test were then carefully looked up from the standpoint of clerical fitness through the various denominational agencies. The clergymen selected have been commissioned with rank from July 1, 1920.

After careful study by representatives of the war department, the proportion of the denominations was tentatively fixed by Secretary of War Baker at 25 per cent for the Roman Catholic church, 70 per cent for the Protestant churches and 5 per cent for adjustments that cannot be made on strictly mathematical apportionment. This conclusion is based on a survey of census reports, as well as the religious census of 1916.

In making the announcement, General Harris adds: "Under the new reorganization law full provision has been made for the moral and spiritual training of our enlisted men. A new corps of chaplains has been created. Their entire effort will be along the lines of character building and moral

POULTRY FACTS

SUCCESS IN RAISING SQUABS

Opportunity Is Well Worth Considering for Those Who Have Lofts—Produce Meat Quickly.

The back yard poultry keeper can hardly hope for success with turkeys, geese, ducks or guineas, but for those who have lofts over a garage, stable, or coal shed, the opportunity for squab growing is well worth considering.

For food purposes pigeons are usually classed with poultry. Culturally they are in a class by themselves, producing meat only, producing it very quickly, and able to produce well under conditions that do not admit of growing any other creature used for food.

While the ideal arrangement for pigeons is to have their house on the ground, and a small covered yard, called a "fly," connecting with it, pigeon keeping may be carried on quite extensively in upper rooms or lofts, with or without open-air flies. Many flocks of pigeons are kept in large cities in quarters provided for them in the lofts or on the roofs of buildings used for mercantile and manufacturing purposes.

A space six feet square and high enough for the attendant to stand erect will accommodate eight to ten pairs of pigeons for squab breeding, the poultry specialists in the United States department of agriculture say. The birds mate and begin breeding when six to seven months old. The male shares with the hen the duty of incubation. The young hatch in about 17 days. At four weeks old, average squabs will weigh about three-quarters of a pound each. Some of the larger ones will weigh over a pound at that age.

A good pair of breeders will produce six or seven or more pairs of squabs a year. As many as 11 pairs of squabs have been produced by one pair in a year. When production is high the female lays and begins incubation while she has young still in the nest, leaving the care of them to her mate.

Raising squabs has been increasing in cities in recent years. On farms the tendency has been the other way. On a farm a flock of free pigeons, if not kept down by killing off the increase, soon becomes a nuisance, destroying grain and doing a great deal of damage, especially on new-seeded ground.

PLAN TO CARRY LIVE FOWLS

Bird Wrapped in Cornucopia of Newspapers and Given Plenty of Air Is Quite Content.

Carrying live fowls in a cornucopia of newspapers in the manner of carrying a bouquet is a good idea. The bird is laid down on the paper and the legs straightened out on a line with the tail, the wings are held in position at the sides. The newspaper is then rolled around the bird, making a cornucopia, and the lower end is twisted, which leaves the upper end open. When carrying the bird in this manner, the twisted end of the cornucopia is held in the hand, allowing the roll to rest on the arm. The bird has plenty of air and seemingly is content in its peculiar position.

PURE BREEDS ARE PAMPERED

Supposition That Common Fowls Are Most Hardy Is Erroneous—Only Strongest Survive.

The supposition that common fowls are harder than pure breeds is not borne out by the facts. Those who hatch chicks of the common kinds lose a large number of them, only the strongest surviving, and every year they are more and more inbred. The pure breeds suffer from being pampered by their owners in many instances, in which cases they do not compare favorably with common fowls.

QUALITIES IN YOUR BLOOD

If You Are Pale and Weak, Without Ambition, You Need a Tonic

TRY TAKING PEPTO-MANGAN

Rich, Red Blood Fights Off Disease and Keeps You Well and Enables You to Work With Pleasure

Serious sickness often comes when you least suspect. You may feel a little over-tired. You haven't been exposed to contagion, yet all of a sudden you are flat on your back and in for a siege of sickness. Your blood did not have fighting qualities. It was weak and thin. Your vitality and powers of resistance were low.

When you overdo you use up energy. Your blood is driven to do more than it can. It becomes clogged with waste. The waste acts like poison. Disease germs get in your blood and dominate.

Don't let yourself get run down. Take that good tonic, Pepto-Mangan. It makes rich, red blood that will resist and rout out disease germs.

Pepto-Mangan is widely and heartily endorsed by physicians. It is effective and easy to take. Comes in either liquid or tablet form. Both have the same effect.

Sold at any drug store. But be sure you get the genuine Pepto-Mangan—Gude's. Ask for it by the name and be sure the full name, "Gude's Pepto-Mangan," is on the package.

You liked Everywoman better than any picture I have yet shown. This I have found out by studying carefully and paying strict attention to your comments. My job is to give you the picture you want and to give you pictures like "Everywoman" is my greatest ambition, because "Everywoman" had a perfect story, perfect settings, perfect acting, perfect dress and costumes, and most of all it had a good moral, and was a clean picture. It was a perfect picture, and you are going to get just as many more perfect pictures as there are produced.

"Everywoman" will be shown again for the benefit of those who did not get to see it. Watch for the date.

You will also have perfect music and comfortable surroundings. I am working hard to make the Theatre complete, also to get a good pipe organ on which deliveries are very slow, and, rather than get a poor instrument I am going to wait until I can get the BEST.

The music will be featured the same as the pictures, therefore it must be the best.

You will find near the exit door as you leave a Suggestion Box write on paper and drop in this box any suggestion you think might help to make this theatre perfect. Ask any question you want the answer to these suggestions and questions will be thrown on the screen the following evening. All suggestions and questions must be signed, your name however will not be known to anyone. (We do this to keep trifflers out.) You can help me, give you the best pictures and music, more comfortable surroundings by using this box. Assuring you that you will absolutely have the very best of everything, and that I appreciate your patronage one and all I am yours for perfect entertainment.

"WHY CHANGE YOUR WIFE?"

A Paramount Arctcraft Picture

When countless pairs of ardent lovers fade into listless "married folks" what's the reason? Who's to blame? The greatest question of modern life, presented and ANSWERED in this fascinating compeer picture to "Everywoman".

Staged with all the beauty, luxury, dramatic fire and action that in "Male and Female" captivated millions. Where was the girl he married? Where the lure, the glamour, the ecstatic sweetheart hours? Like beauty, conscience. We left in "Everywoman" it seemed they faded (in this case) into dull, drab matrimony.

Was he wholly to blame when another woman, aglow with joy of living, slipped into his life which his wife left vacant. Was he?

Gowns that for beauty and style outrival anything ever seen on the screen are a feature

"GORRY"

By BEATRICE L. BULIS.

(Copyright, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Ann Reed and Don Graves, stanch friends since infancy, had quarreled. This was unusual, and to Gordon Thurston, "little brother" to both, it was serious. Don had gone back to college without "making up" with Ann. Three weeks had passed with no messages passing between them.

Gordon, intimately known as "Gorry," worshipped Don and adored Ann.

It was several weeks since the quarrel that Gorry was seated at his father's big roll-top desk, chewing the end of a pencil he held in his hand. A deep frown wrinkled his ten-year-old forehead; he was lost in thought.

"I can't stand it any longer!" he murmured as he set to work laboriously for nearly an hour. Then, with a sigh of relief, he carefully folded the paper, and after slipping it into a huge envelope which he found on the desk, he addressed it in a scrawling hand, pounded a stamp in the corner with his little fist, grabbed up his cap and dashed from the house. A few moments later and the envelope had been thrust into the corner mail box.

The next afternoon Ann was seated in the living room reading when Gorry suddenly appeared at the door.

"Oh, Ann, it's awful dull. Will you play with me?" he asked, with a nervous air.

"Why, surely, Gorry dear. What shall we play?"

"Let's play I'm a doctor and you're sick. Let me fix you; put your feet up in this chair; lean back and act sickier'n anything."

Gorry stepped back to view his smiling patient. "Something's wrong, and I know what it is. Your hair ought to be down in two pieces like mother's was when she was in the hospital. Please put it down."

"Why, you queer child. Whatever has struck you today?"

At that Gorry blushed.

Gorry brought over a small pencil, gently placed it in Ann's mouth, and felt her pulse on the wrong side of her wrist. After a short minute Gorry took out the pencil, walked over to the window and examined the length of the pencil critically. He returned, shaking his head hopelessly.

"You've got lots of fever, ma'am," he said quite hastily. "You must close your eyes and keep perfectly still. Hurry up! Close 'em!"

Ann obeyed; she'd do anything for Gorry.

"Keep 'em closed tight," ordered the amateur doctor in an excited voice. Then he tiptoed from the room.

Presently Ann felt her hands clasped tightly. Opening her eyes, she found a man kneeling at her side.

"Don!" she gasped.

"Oh, Ann, I'm so sorry. Why didn't you let me know? Won't you forgive me for my foolishness? Can't I do something for you? Ann, don't look at me like that!" whispered Don in an agonized voice.

"Why, Don, what's the trouble? Why are you here? What has happened? Why do you look so? Don, you're crushing my hand. What is the trouble? Where's Gorry?" questioned the bewildered Ann as she attempted to rise.

"Don't get up, Ann. Didn't Gorry tell you? That's queer. Yesterday I got a letter from Gordon telling me that you were very sick and that I'd better come right home on my usual train and 'make up' with you. Why, Ann, what are you laughing at? Don't laugh so hard; it might make you worse."

"Worse?" laughed Ann. "Oh, Don, who's the joke on? I'm not sick; that is, not really; I'm just playing doctor with Gorry. I'm the patient."

"Well, then why did he write me that letter?"

"I—I—I don't know," hesitated Ann, "but I can guess."

"So can I," came Don's answer as he joined her in a mutual smile of understanding. "Let's ask him to tell us, Oh, Gorry. I say, Gorry, come here."

No answer. Don went to the door and called again. Soon a door upstairs closed, and Gorry slowly descended the stairway with a worried expression upon his little face. He and Don returned to Ann where Gorry confessed all as he stood twisting Ann's braids around his hand, looking from one to the other with half-ashamed, half-triumphant glances.

"I—I couldn't think of any other way. I knew Ann wasn't mad at you, Donny, and I knew you wasn't mad at her, 'cause nobody could get mad at her. Ann didn't get any letters from you and I knew she hadn't written to you 'cause you'd have answered if she had. Besides, everything's all wrong when you two are mad, and I just had to do something. So I wrote that letter and had Ann play sick just when your train came in. Was I awful naughty?" he sobbed on Ann's shoulder.

"No, dear, you were a perfect angel," smiled Ann as she kissed the boy.

"Angel? Huh! You were a brick!" exclaimed Don. "You've got brains, Gorry, old scout. Here's a quarter and give me your hand."

"Have you made up with her?" asked Gorry anxiously as he received the quarter and handshake with thanks.

"I've forgiven Ann," replied Don.

"I've forgiven Don," echoed Ann.

"I've added," Don, "what was it."

Five Minute Chats
on Our Presidents

By JAMES MORGAN

(Copyright, 1920, by James Morgan.)

A MAN AFOOT

1797-1801—Vice president.
1801—Inaugurated third president, aged 57.
1803—Purchased Louisiana.
1807—Enforced Embargo act.
1809—Retired to Monticello.
1826—July 4, died, aged 83.

THE furious storm aroused by the combat between Thomas Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton, the greatest gladiators to face each other in the arena of American politics, makes our recent campaigns seem like sunshowers. Hamiltonians scorned to eat and drink, and sometimes even to pray, with the Jeffersonians. To give a daughter in marriage with one of them was almost as abhorred as miscegenation.

Nothing else so stirs the angry passions as a conflict of classes or of sections. This was both doubly bitter. An almost solid South united with the Northern masses in a common dread of a strong government and in a common hostility to the old ruling caste in the middle states and New England. The new parties called themselves Federalists and Republicans.

In the first battle, when those parties fought for the chair of Washington in 1796, the result was so close that Jefferson came within two electoral votes of winning the presidency against Adams. In the second battle, which was waged in 1800, he beat Adams.

Contrary to the familiar story of his hitching his horse to the capitol fence, Jefferson walked to his inauguration and afterward walked back to his boarding house, which was only a few hundred yards away. This man, afoot, dreamer and theorist, quietly ushered in that day a more lasting revolution than a man on horseback could have wrought with a sword and whiff of grapeshot.

Believing that revolutions should begin at home Jefferson revolutionized the White House by casting aside the ceremonials which had been adopted in a feeble imitation of kingly courts. Opening the doors to all, without regard to social classifications and without order of precedence, his rule was "first come, first served." Determined that the president, as he said, should cease to be a personage, he stopped the custom of celebrating a president's birthday, never made a public tour, did his own marketing and went and came like any other citizen. Although no successor has thrown a British minister into a fit of indignation by receiving him in slippers, Jeffersonian simplicity rather more than Washingtonian courtliness remains the standard of presidential conduct.

It was the strange fortune of this most thoroughgoing pacifist to find himself at the helm in the midst of a world at war. When the globe was bristling with bayonets until it looked like a porcupine, he calmly announced that peace was his passion, and started out by cutting down his little army one-half and by talking of hauling up his seven warships. His only interest in the Napoleonic struggle was to keep out of it.

Nevertheless while the military powers were fighting over little islands and provinces and drenching Europe with their blood, this most un military president, without firing a shot, gathered in far richer spoils than the victors in twenty-five years of warfare divided among themselves at the congress of Vienna. As Jefferson's election was a bloodless revolution, his purchase of the immense empire of Louisiana, which doubled the territory of the United States, was a bloodless conquest, the greatest peaceable annexation the world ever saw. Having made it, the flag was no more than hoisted on the farther bank of the Mississippi than he dispatched Lewis and Clark and Captain Pike boldly to spy out the unexplored rivers and mountains of the new soil, so honestly won, and from which so many free states were to spring.

Jefferson is the only president who remained the leader of his party at David Dibert, of Altoona, a railroad fireman, fell from his train near Gallitzin and was killed.

Half an hour after Mrs. John C. Ivory, wife of an Altoona contractor, died, her daughter, Madeline, was married to Ralph C. Stoltz, at St. Leo's Catholic church. The wedding party was just leaving the house when death occurred. It was Mrs. Ivory's wish that her illness should not interfere with the ceremony.

Whisky, valued by prohibition agents at $1500, was confiscated in raids in Millin township, near Pittsburgh. Rev. W. M. Woodfin, of Homeburg, a special prohibition agent, who conducted the raids, reported that in one of the saloons an employee offered him $500 if he would not confiscate the liquor.

The question of upkeep of the imposing stone staircase which leads to the $150,000 schoolhouse given Weatherly nineteen years ago by Charles M. Schwab, whose wife spent her girlhood here, is agitating the town. The steps and coping require attention and council and the school board cannot agree which body is responsible.

Robert K. Rhodes, a member of the Lehigh Electrical Supply company, died from burns suffered when the explosion of an oil stove caused the destruction of his place of business in Bethlehem. He was twenty-five years old.

Joseph Joulwan, a merchant of Pottsville, who sold an automobile stolen in Philadelphia to Irvin Berger, was sentenced by Judge Koch to serve a year in jail and to return the $650 he got from Berger. Joulwan says he bought the automobile from a prominent Philadelphia whom he cannot find now. Joulwan has been active in politics and was recently a defendant charged with extensive ballot frauds in the Fifth ward, on which charges he was convicted.

One was killed and three were injured in two accidents in which the same automobile figured, between Fairchance and Uniontown. Mrs. Ralph Kelley, aged 52 years, is dead, and the others are lying severely hurt at their home. First, a racing automobile struck another machine as it passed it at high speed, and a woman and child, whose name could not be learned, were injured. Several hundred yards away, a buggy in which Mrs. Kelley and her daughter, Mary, were riding, was hit and demolished, and Mrs. Kelley sustained fractured skull, from which she died in the Uniontown hospital. The daughter is not seriously injured.

A gang of six burglars, broke into the Reading station at Gordon, near Ashland, loaded a 500-pound safe on a motor truck and left unmolested, taking the road over the Broad Mountain toward Minersville. The safe contained about $150 in cash, 1000 railroad tickets, a book of blank express money orders, a pay check and other valuable papers.

Manufactured and mined products of Cumberland county had a value of $18,270,000 in 1919, almost double the value of the products of 1916, according to a report issued by Secretary of Internal Affairs Woodward. The production for 1917 was $12,000,000, and for 1918 $13,201,000.

Joseph Goldberg, of Columbus, O., was brought to a Beaver Falls hospital with two bullet wounds in his body after a fight near Darlington with bandits. David Aronvitz, of Cleveland, Goldberg's traveling companion, was held by the police pending an investigation. Goldberg said he was driving from Pittsburgh to Cleveland and when near Darlington was held up by a party of men in a touring car and, after being shot, was robbed of $1000. He denied that he was transporting whisky and that several cases had been stolen by the robbers from his car.

McKeesport policemen and firemen have formulated plans to be presented to council next week asking for the establishment of a pension fund, an eight hour working day, a wage increase of 50 per cent, and one free uniform a year. The policemen, who now receive $1800, will get $200 a year more than the mayor if the proposed wage increase is granted.

James Pappas, of Chester, was attacked at the door of his home as he was about to enter it by two men and brutally beaten on the head. He was insensible when picked up and taken to the Chester hospital, where his condition is considered critical. Before the hold-up men could rifle the pockets of their victim the screams of a woman neighbor who had witnessed the assault frightened off the men, who escaped. The bandits had been lying in wait for Pappas, knowing when he would return from his place of business.

The state of Pennsylvania brought the moving picture camera into service as a means of adding the state's apple growing industry, photographs being taken of orchards before, during and after picking and methods of packing. These pictures will be shown to illustrate results of scientific care of trees and the proper methods of handling the fruit. Reports from the experimental potato growing grounds near Jeddo and Weatherly indicated over 500 bushels to the acre in some places. These plantings were made to determine whether certain varieties would resist the potato wart and other diseases, and has been successful, except in a few instances. In the neighborhood of Jeddo as high as 564 bushels to the acre were grown. The potatoes grown will be used for seed by the state, especially in districts affected by the wart.

While showing a boy companion how easily a 22-calibre rifle worked, Thomas Davis, aged 15 years, of Plains, near Wilkes-Barre, killed his brother-in-law, Harold Gregory. Gregory was married to Davis' sister only last month. The boy thought the "safety" was on the gun.

Miners of the Schuylkill region are investing heavily in bonds of all kinds with the $2,500,000 in back pay now being distributed by the coal companies. Bond salesmen swarm in the region and report sales exceeding all records. The big sums paid out are causing the coal companies to closely guard the sacks of money being sent from Pottsville every day, scores of extra coal and iron police protecting the paymasters from any attempts at robbery.

Whisky valued at $1000 was seized by a department of justice agent on a Pullman car of the Cincinnati and Chicago express of the Pennsylvania railroad when the train pulled into Union station at Pittsburgh. Department of Justice Agent Polen, a passenger on the train, discovered the liquor when he tripped over a suit case. He investigated and found a number of quart bottles of whisky. Three other suit cases and two traveling bags also contained liquor. No one claimed the bags.

The Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association, in convention at Harrisburg, re-elected John Wanamaker honorary president, and Percy L. Craig, of New Castle, president. John W. Vickerman, Allegheny county; Mrs. M. C. Easton, Moore county, and Mrs. John Y. Boyd, Harrisburg, were elected vice presidents. All officers of last year were re-elected. THE BEST ADVICE FOR MOTHERS

WILKES BARRE, PA.

"About thirty years ago I had my first experience with Dr. Pierce's medicine. After motherhood my health failed. I did not get any help in any medicine I took. At last I saw the 'Favorite Prescription' advertised and decided to give it a trial, and it completely built me up in health and strength. Since that time I have always taken 'Favorite Prescription' when in need of a tonic, and I always found it very beneficial and consider it the very best woman's medicine there is."—MRS. MALKERNER, 70 Moyallen St.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a remedy that any ailing woman can safely take, because it is prepared from roots, does not contain alcohol or narcotics. Its ingredients are listed on wrapper. Send ten cents for trial package of "Favorite Prescription Tablets" to Doctor Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., or write for advice.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(© 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR NOVEMBER 7

PRINCIPLES OF CHRISTIAN LIVING.

LESSON TEXT—Matt. 6:1-7, 12. GOLDEN TEXT—Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you.—Matt. 6:33

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Mark 10:23-31, Luke 11:24, 12:22-32.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Our Heavenly Father's Care

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Teaching How to Pray.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Golden Rules for Living.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Counsels for Daily Living.

Having set forth in the previous chapters the standard of righteousness, Christ now exhibits the underlying principles which control the heir to the kingdom.

I. As to Giving (6:1-4).

Doing alms before men is not condemned, as that would contradict Matthew 5:16, but the doing of them before men to be seen of them. To seek publicity in doing our alms is to miss the reward of our heavenly Father.

II. As to Praying (6:5-15).

1. False prayer (vv. 5, 7). This consists (1) in praying to be seen and heard of men (v. 5). (2) Using vain repetitions (v. 7). This does not mean that we should ask but once, for we have examples of Christ and Paul praying three times for the same thing (Matt. 26:39-46; II Cor. 12:7-8), but the using of meaningless repetitions.

2. True prayer (v. 6). Since prayer is a transaction of the soul with God, we should have a real desire for fellowship with the Father, then go and meet him in secret.

3. The model prayer (vv. 9-15). This involves (1) right relationship—"Our Father" (v. 9); (2) right attitude—"Hallowed be thy name" (v. 9, 10); (3) right spirit—"Give us our daily bread," "Forgive us our sins" ("Lead us not into temptation" (vv. 11-13).

III. As to Fasting (vv. 16-24).

The Lord knew the temptation which would befall his children in their pilgrimage here below touching wordliness, and the anxiety to which it would lead; therefore, he sets forth the proper attitude toward them:

1. The nature of earthly riches (vv. 19, 21). (1) Uncertain (vv. 19, 20). Earthly treasures corrode, or are taken from us. (2) Seductive (v. 21). Christ called riches deceitful (Matt. 13:22). It is not wrong to possess earthly treasures, but when earthly treasures possess us they become a snare.

2. The effect of earthly riches (vv. 22-24). (1) They blunt the moral and spiritual perceptions (vv. 22-23). When the heart is upon earthly treasures it is taken off God. (2) They render null and void all service (v. 24).

IV. As to Faith in the Heavenly Father (vv. 25-34).

1. Be not anxious about food and clothing (vv. 25-32). Because (1) it shows distrust for God (v. 30). (2) It is useless (v. 31). Anxiety can bring nothing. (3) It is heathenish (v. 32). Those who have not learned to know God may worry over temporal affairs, but those who know him as a loving Father should be free from care.

2. Be anxious to seek the kingdom of God and serve him (vv. 33, 34). This does not forbid proper forethought in making a reasonable support for one's self and family.

V. As to Censorious Judgments (7:1-12).

1. The sin and folly of censorious judgments. This does not forbid us making an estimate of the lives of those about us, for "by their fruits ye shall know them," neither does it prevent us from administering rebuke to those who deserve it. It rebukes that readiness to blame others and to magnify their weakness and errors.

2. The duty of discrimination in dealing out holy things (v. 6). The gospel should be preached to all, but there should be discrimination, for "dogs and swine" have no comprehension as to holy things.

3. Qualification for discrimination (vv. 7-12). (1) A life of prayer (v. 7-11). A life of prayer is a requisite for rightly divining the word of truth. (2) A disposition to treat others as one would be treated (v. 12). Confucius set forth this principle negatively, but only the Christ could do it positively. Between the negative and positive sides of this rule is found the difference between heathenism and Christianity. No man can live this rule unless he has been born from above and abides with Christ in the school of prayer, till he becomes like him.

What God Requires.

What God requires is an undivided will—a yielding will, desiring only what he desires, rejecting only what he rejects, and both unreservedly. Where such a mind is, everything turns to good, and its very amusements become good works. Happy indeed is such a one.—Fenelon.

When Death Comes.

When death, the great reconciler, has come it is never our tenderness that we regret of, but our severity.—George Eliot.

HIS GARDEN GIRL

By MILDRED WHITE.

(© 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

Barrie was lonely. The city was so different from what he had been led to believe. Barrie had supposed that life there would be one round of jollity with new companionable friends. The few fellows he met did not appear to be companionable; rather, they were absorbed in the friends they now had. It was strange to be unnoticed and alone. He was tempted to return to Hillcrest, where at least one might find a smile of welcome. An indisposition, which kept him indoors at the dull house where he boarded, almost forced Barrie to yield to this temptation.

It was at evening, when Barrie discarded wearily his last newspaper, that he first saw the girl. She was talking about the square of garden bending close to the old fence where dusty flowers showed their heads. The girl wore a white dress and hummed as she moved from flower to flower, as if the garden were still the grand park that it used to be, and she the daughter of the great house. The girl's hair was brown with golden lights where the sun touched it, and when she raised her face toward Barrie's window—as one does when drawn by a steady gaze, Barrie was aware of a feeling of recognition in his admiration, as if he had known all along that this girl must come. To the lonely man it seemed that here was one who knows loneliness, too.

And as the girl saw Barrie in his window surrounded by pillows, she nodded in a friendly way, and smiled, bending again to her flowers. He asked Mrs. Hanley about her that night, with a studied carelessness in his tone. His landlady put down her tray and told him all she knew about Miss Anabel Stratford. Like his own, was the girl's story. She had come from a desolated home in a country town to make her way in the city. She was secretary to a great man of affairs. Mrs. Hanley had given over the garden plot to Anabel at her request for a bit of a flower bed.

The very flowers grew for Anabel where nobody else could make them. Her room, Mrs. Hanley told him, was just above his. She made friends of everyone in the old house. Through the tedious days of convalescence which followed, Barrie's interest centered about the girl. Seated at his window each evening he watched eagerly for her garden visit and when she came singing softly, Anabel never failed in a smile of greeting.

And later she had added a friendly wave of the hand to her greeting. And when Barrie discovered that she also came out to her garden in the morning before her departure, he was up, awaiting her appearance there. It was remarkable what a difference a morning smile or a "called up" inquiry concerning his health could make in Barrie's day. He found himself humming over his newspaper, and return to Hillcrest was no longer inviting.

When Barrie was able he stepped across the narrow hall to the larger room which he had rented during his illness for a sitting room.

He would feel more free, he was sure without the narrow limitations of the sleeping room which had been his prison. And as he entered this other room he stood still in surprise, for upon mantel, table and desk, in various cases and in different states of freshness, were many flowers which had been called he knew, from Anabel Stratford's garden each day.

She must have placed a flower for him there from the time the room had been taken. She had thought, that his evenings were spent in this room Barrie decided, and was happy.

Mrs. Hanley had no doubt given to the girl his own history of loneliness, and the girl had expressed her sympathy in flowers. Sympathy? He wondered if an interest as deep as his own must not awaken like interest.

Then it came to Barrie suddenly, what it would mean if the girl should go out of his life, never to see again in the garden herself—the smile that thrilled him so strangely. This was love he knew, unbelievable as it seemed here in this dingy old house, his heart had found its own.

Barrie picked out a full red rose—red roses meant love he had heard—he would drop this from the window and if she could guess— A young woman stood in the doorway. "Beg pardon," she said "but I haven't removed all my belongings from your room. It was mine before you rented it. Now I am on the lower floor. I came back for the flowers Anabel had been banking here for me. She leaves a flower every morning, and did you know that I'd gone?" As the brisk young woman removed her flowers she nodded back at Barrie, sitting there, gazing listlessly down at his one red rose. And as he slowly made his way to the open window above the garden plot he heard the young woman speaking below to Anabel Stratford.

"He sat there, that silent adorer of yours," she was saying, "with one red rose clasped pathetically in his hand. An offering of love I'll warrant which he intended to give to you."

But long after the mocking young woman had gone he sat brooding alone. Anabel came again to her garden. For a moment she stood holding up to him in the moonlight a perfect crimson rose. And later, Barrie, hearing the echo of a little song, found the rose lying just outside his door.

Women Who Control The Purse Strings have already taken some of the high out of the cost of living.

They pulled the purse strings tighter and the pendulum swung back from extravagance to sanity in buying.
For universal welfare a steady middle course is best and this lack of extremes is the true definition of thrift.
A household checking account at this Institution makes it easier to regulate the purse-strings and maintain a budget planned to keep home expenditures well balanced.
